Test Related Medical Information

- Blood tests (CBC & ESR) to rule out a wide spectrum of diseases including anemia, bleeding disorders, any acute or chronic infection, allergies etc.
- Urine tests for ruling out diabetes, jaundice or any infections of the urinary tract. These also act as preliminary markers for screening of kidney disease.
- Blood group/ Rh factor analysis for awareness and future requirement, especially in case of an emergency with requirement of blood transfusion.
- CRP as a marker of inflammation in the body.
- Peripheral Smear, to help diagnose a range of deficiencies, diseases, and disorders involving blood cell production, function, and destruction; and to monitor cell production and cell maturity.
- Urine Culture Sensitivity test to screen for any infections.
- Stool Examination to detect the presence of any worms or parasites which may be the cause of allergies and anemia.
- Stool Occult Blood for screening for various conditions affecting the gastrointestinal tract including certain malignancies and ulcers.
- Fasting Blood Sugar, to rule out diabetes.
- Blood sugar testing, fasting and post meal, as part of the Diabetic Evaluation - Regular to screen for diabetes, the silent killer. (India has the maximum number of people affected by diabetes in the world).
- Total Protein levels to check the functioning of the liver.
- Alkaline Phosphatase is an enzyme found in the liver, bones, intestines, kidneys, and other organs. Kids and teens normally have higher levels of ALP than adults, even when they're healthy, due to bone growth. But ALP levels can also increase when kids have viral infections or diseases of the liver.

- Bilirubin, to check liver function and watch for signs of liver disease, such as jaundice, hepatitis or cirrhosis, or the effects of medicines that can damage the liver or to find out if something is blocking the bile ducts, which may occur if gallstones, tumors of the pancreas, or other conditions are present.
- SGOT and SGPT are liver enzymes and early markers for any damage to the liver or any compromise in the liver function due to alcohol or medication abuse, viral hepatitis, or any other disease process causing liver damage.
- GGT (Gamma - Glutamyl Transferase) is a screening test for liver disease and is commonly used to identify early signs of liver damage in customers with regular or excessive alcohol intake. It also helps to determine whether a raised ALP level is because of liver or bone disease.
- HbsAg (Hepatitis B surface antigen) or (Australia Antigen) is recognized as a specific marker for Hepatitis B virus infection, which causes one of the most severe types of liver diseases. It not only diagnoses the infection but also indicates infectiousness, severity and the future outlook of liver disease. With the increasing incidence of Hepatitis B virus infection, this test is becoming extremely important.
- Serum Creatinine level evaluation is the simplest and most commonly used indicator of kidney function.
- BUN (Blood Urea Nitrogen) levels help in detecting kidney disease, as well as severe dehydration, severe stress, and high fever amongst others.

- Serum Uric Acid levels which help in detecting kidney function and any compromised state like alcohol abuse, kidney disease, and gout.
- Serum Calcium is a blood test to measure the amount of calcium in the blood. Serum calcium is usually measured to screen for or monitor bone diseases or calcium-regulation disorders (diseases of the parathyroid gland or kidneys).
- Phosphorus test is done to assess phosphorus levels in the blood, to help diagnose or monitor kidney disorders, gastrointestinal and nutritional disorders, and calcium and bone problems.
- (TSH & FT4) Panel comprises of, TSH (Thyroid Stimulating Hormone), which is often considered the “gold standard” to assess thyroid function and evidence suggests that it can detect sub clinical thyroid disease in people without symptoms of thyroid dysfunction; and FT4, which is reflective of unbound and directly effective thyroid hormone levels.
- Serum Cholesterol, is different from most tests in that it is not used to diagnose or monitor a disease but is used to estimate risk of developing a disease — specifically heart disease. Because high blood cholesterol has been associated with hardening of the arteries (atherosclerosis), heart disease, and a raised risk of death from heart attacks, cholesterol testing is considered a routine part of preventive health care.
- (Cholesterol & Triglycerides) Lipid Screen is a blood test for assessing the levels of fats and cholesterol that can increase the risk of heart disease and stroke. This comprises of the estimation of the total cholesterol levels which directly indicate the risk of coronary heart disease, hypertension, arterial thrombosis; and the triglyceride levels which is one of the risk factors of metabolic syndrome and increases the risk for heart disease and other disorders, including diabetes.

- Lipid Profile is an exhaustive blood test for assessing the levels of fats and cholesterol that can increase the risk of heart disease and stroke. This comprises of the estimation of the total cholesterol levels which directly indicate your risk of coronary heart disease, hypertension, arterial thrombosis; triglyceride levels which is one of the risk factors of metabolic syndrome and increases the risk for heart disease and other disorders, including diabetes. Cholesterol sub components into HDL (High Density Lipoproteins, indicative of “Good” cholesterol), LDL (Low Density Lipoproteins, indicative of “Bad” cholesterol), and VLDL (Very Low Density Lipoproteins) and the ratio of total cholesterol to HDL, as well as LDL to HDL cholesterol, thereby giving an accurate picture of your blood lipid level and helping in determining the exact causes of risk and the treatment protocol to be followed.
- hsCRP (high sensitivity C - Reactive Protein) is a marker for inflammation, and is increasingly being used by cardiologists, either by itself or along with other tests for effective cardiac disease risk evaluation.
- Serum Iron, very useful in determining the cause of anemia. Iron tests can also be used when iron deficiency is being treated to tell if the iron is being absorbed properly and to detect when enough iron has been taken. The test also may be ordered to rule out excessive levels of iron.
- IgE, a screening test for allergies in children.
- Testosterone a hormone responsible for puberty in boys is measured to screen for any hormonal imbalances.
- LH, or Luteinizing Hormone is responsible for the production of testosterone and its estimation is a screening test for any hormonal imbalances caused by a number of underlying reasons.

- LH (Luteinizing Hormone), FSH (Follicle Stimulating Hormone), and LH:FSH Ratio, are evaluations to assess the hormone balance in the body and to screen for any disturbances which arise from the imbalance of these hormones as they play an important role in puberty, menstrual cycle, and the general well being of the person. In certain cases these may also help screen for polycystic ovarian disorder and other hormone related conditions.
- VDRL, is a test for the diagnosis of syphilis, which is a highly treatable disease.
- Estradiol test measures the amount of a hormone called estradiol in the blood. Estradiol is the most important form of estrogen found in the body. This test is used to check the function of the ovaries, placenta, or adrenal glands, particularly when certain types of ovarian tumor are suspected or when there is delayed or abnormal development of male or female body characteristics. It is especially important for any kinds of menstrual or other hormonal disturbance screening.
- PSA (Prostate Specific Antigen) levels estimation in blood for the screening of prostate cancer, which is the most common cancer among men. As this cancer does not produce any noticeable symptoms in its early stages, and many cases aren't detected until the cancer has spread beyond the prostate, so it is very important to screen regularly for prostate cancer. Early detection can positively affect the treatment and prognosis of prostate cancer. A number of non cancerous conditions like benign enlargement of the prostate, urinary infections, and prostate inflammation can also cause an abnormality in PSA levels.
- CA 125 is a marker for ovarian cancer and is a useful test as ovarian cancer usually is asymptomatic in its early stages. The values could also be affected by other benign conditions.

What is the utility of preventive health checks in children?

Preventive health checks are of immense importance for early detection and screening for diseases affecting children. Children are commonly affected by infections, allergies and nutritional deficiencies which can be detected and easily corrected. Studies suggest that children who have undergone health checks are healthier than those who did not get their health checks done.

Is it important to get health check ups for normal healthy children?

Children who look apparently healthy may actually be suffering from anemia, chronic infections or nutritional deficiencies without very apparent symptoms. These can be detected early if children undergo health check ups regularly.

Serious problems may occasionally manifest as trivial symptoms hence delaying diagnosis and treatment.

How frequently should health check ups be done for children?

Health check ups should be done once a year between the ages of 2-6 years and then once every two years. You could also discuss this with your Family Physician or Pediatrician.

What is a screening test?

A screening test is method of detecting disease in an individual who does not have any signs and symptoms of the disease. It helps to detect the disease early and allows the individual to take corrective action

How are allergies present in children?

Allergies have varied manifestations in children. They may be present as a post nasal drip, running nose, cough, wheezing, itching all over the body, skin rashes, dryness and scaling of skin etc. Allergies have become common in recent times due to the increase in environmental pollutants. Rarer presentations of allergy could be as fatigue, weakness, sore throat etc.

Why is it important to measure cholesterol in children?

Many studies have demonstrated that atherosclerosis (presence of fatty streaks within arteries) has its silent beginning during childhood

Junk food, diet rich in saturated fats and lack of physical activity are all contributory and lead to obesity in children with an increased risk of cardiac disease at a later age. Studies in eminent pediatric journals have also shown lipid levels to be higher in children of parents with premature coronary artery disease.

16% of children and adolescents (2-19 years) suffer from obesity in the United States. The disease is becoming common in India too. These children are at increased risk of cardiac disease at a later stage. Also screening for cholesterol level abnormalities in children may help to uncover any inherited disorders of lipid metabolism early in life.

Why should we test IgE in children?

One of the common allergies known as allergic rhinitis is caused by pollens, dust, mites and other atmospheric pollutants. Over 20 million Americans are affected by this disease and it is commoner in children and adolescents. Allergies are fast becoming common in India due to increased levels of pollutants. Children with these allergic conditions have increased levels of IgE.

Are nutritional disorders common in children and Adolescents?

Children and women are at greater risk for iron deficiency. This may be associated with poor eating habits.

Eating disorders are complex illnesses that affect adolescents with increasing frequency. In fact in Canada they rank as the third most common chronic illness in adolescent females. This may lead to adverse consequences in later years including osteoporosis, obesity, hyperlipaemia, sexual maturation delays and affected height of an individual.

Estimation of serum Iron, calcium and phosphorous, haemoglobin levels and cholesterol are some of the indicators used to assess the nutritional status of the individual.

How do hormonal imbalances affect adolescent females?

Hormones secreted by the pituitary gland (a small gland in the brain) and ovaries help in the normal development of female reproductive organs. Excess or deficiency of these hormones can lead to irregular menstruation (periods), an ovulation and infertility.

Additionally PCOS (Polycystic Ovarian Syndrome) is a common conditions occurring in young females as a result of hormonal imbalance. It may present as weight gain, acne, irregular periods and can also cause a reversal of the LH:FSH ratio .

Knowing the thyroid hormone levels females in all age groups is also relevant as imbalances of this hormone are common amongst females. Thyroid hormone helps in regulating the metabolism of the body and thyroid problems may therefore present themselves either as weight loss or weight gain. It can play havoc with a woman's puberty and menstruation. Abnormally high or low levels of thyroid hormone can cause very light/very heavy or irregular menstrual periods. They can even lead to amenorrhea (absence of menstrual periods). An over- or under-active thyroid can prevent a woman from ovulating. Also, the ovaries are at a heightened risk for cyst development if the woman has an under-active thyroid

How do hormonal imbalances manifest in adolescent males?

Testosterone is a hormone secreted by the testes. It helps in the production of sperms and the development of secondary sexual characters in males. LH or Leutinizing hormone helps in the production of testosterone in the testes. A deficiency of these hormones leads to improper development of the reproductive organs in the males and can also result in infertility.

Does the lipid profile offered by health and wellness card have a measured Direct LDL or a calculated LDL? What is the importance of Direct LDL to the clinician?

Lipid profile estimation includes results for Total cholesterol, LDL cholesterol, HDL Cholesterol, Triglycerides, VLDL Cholesterol, LDL/HDL ratio and cholesterol /HDL ratio

LDL Cholesterol (Low Density Lipoprotein) is also known as 'Bad cholesterol. It is deposited in the inner lining of blood vessels and results in atheromatous plaques in the blood vessels supplying the heart and the brain. Several laboratories do not actually perform LDL Cholesterol as a part of the lipid profile and instead use a formula to calculate the levels of LDL reported. These results are therefore approximate levels and not actual levels.

Cardiologists and Physicians today depend greatly on the levels of LDL cholesterol to initiate and monitor treatment for lipid disorders. All prefer measured LDL cholesterol i.e direct LDL. Elevated blood levels of LDL cholesterol are important to clinicians to decide if medication is required to lower these levels. Your panels includes a measured (direct) LDL

How common are thyroid disorders in females?

Over 40 million Indians - 60 per cent of them women - suffer from thyroid-related disorders, according to the Cochin-based Indian Thyroid Society (ITS).

According to experts, approximately one in 50 women and one in 1,000 men are likely to develop symptoms of hypothyroidism (lack of thyroid levels) at some stage in their lives. In case of mild hypothyroidism, the patient may not see the symptoms coming - simply because the condition exhibits no symptoms at all. Weight gain however is the commonest symptom.

A hyperactive thyroid, manufactures an overdose of thyroid hormones. The condition is called hypothyroidism and it triggers weight loss, a faster heart rate and sensitivity to heat. Hyperthyroidism can cause restlessness, irritability, increased perspiration, fatigue, insomnia, irregular menstrual periods and muscle weakness. Sometimes, the tissues around the eyes swell up and appear to bulge out, leading to 'toad eyes'. Very often, symptoms of hyperthyroidism - such as lack of menstruation, hot flashes, insomnia and mood swings - are confused with the onset of menopause.

Graves' disease an auto immune disorder is common amongst women, teens and middle-aged adults.

The good news with Thyroid disorders is that if detected in time, they are usually easy to treat and cure.

What is estradiol?

Estradiol also popularly referred to as E 2 is a sex hormone. Estradiol is the most important form of estrogen found in the body. Most of it is made in and secreted from the ovaries, adrenal cortex, and placenta.

Estradiol is responsible for the growth of the female uterus, Fallopian tubes, and vagina. It promotes breast development and the growth of the outer genitals. The hormone plays a role in the distribution of body fat in women and stops the process of growing taller.

It not only critically affects reproductive and sexual functioning but also affects other organs like bone structuring. In females it helps in the growth of the reproductive organs. Deficiency of estradiols in menopausal women leads to severe menopausal symptoms. Estradiol therapy may also be used in cases of infertility. Hence it is important to know the levels of estradiol in blood in females.

What is hsCRP?

hsCRP or High-sensitivity C-reactive protein test is most often done in conjunction with other tests that are ordered to assess risk of heart disease, usually lipid profile, to assess risk of cardiac disease. In fact, the risk for heart attack in people in the upper third of hs-CRP levels has been determined to be twice that of those whose hs-CRP level is in the lower third.

What is GGT?

Gamma Glutamyl Transferase (GGT) or Gamma GT is an enzyme that is found mainly in the liver, but it may also be found in the kidney, biliary tract, heart, brain, intestine, pancreas and the spleen. It is a sensitive indicator of hepatobiliary disease

Its levels increase in cases of damage to the bile duct. Its levels in blood are increased in cases of cirrhosis, fatty liver, alcoholic liver diseases, gall stone disorders, liver tumours and medication.

What is the importance of CA125?

CA 125 is an important tumour marker in the evaluation of pelvic masses. It is a glycoprotein present in 80% of non mucinous ovarian carcinomas. Overall CA 125 levels correlate with disease in 87% individuals. Although normal levels do not rule out disease, its elevated levels suggest that further investigations are required.
